October ideal.

It has been set forth that to hold the exposition later would conflict with the November elections: while earlier would cause a crossing of purposes and results with other soil and product shows being held in the south. October has been nelected as an ideal month for the event being the crux of the harvest period, and peculiarly safe in El Pasio from a clear, sunny weather view. An investigation of precipitation from October, 1990, to October, 1915, showed that there had been a total precipitation of 14.24 inches, or .96 inch average for October.

Mayor and Council Included.

At the meeting will be the local advisory beard of the international Parm congress, the local beard of control of the International Irrigation congress, the members of the city council and mayor Tom Lea, Richard F.
Burges president of the International
